```

```
)
```

- B. Data is loaded starting at the end of the existing data.
- C. All loaded data is rolled back if the utility terminates abnormally.

- C. An application using static SQL with host variables is bound with REOPT(ALWAYS). Certain data ranges are heavily populated; others are sparsely populated.
- D. An application using dynamic SQL where data is highly volatile. Histogram stats provide statistics about the variation of the data over time which allows the optimizer to more accurately determine a good access path.

Correct Answer: C
